Phew!

Well, it is finally official... Beaver Creek has survived another round in the attempts by Metro and the City of Oregon City to begin the process of bringing our rural community into the Urban Growth Boundary.

On Dec 5, 2002, the Metro Council chose NOT to bring in property south of the Oregon City Golf Club including land up to Henrici Rd. It was also decided not to bring in the property south of Henrici Road that the Planning Commission of Oregon City had recommended.

Metro is required by State law to have a 20-year supply of land for future residential development inside the boundary. Every five years the Metro Council is required to conduct a "periodic review" of the land supply and, if necessary, expand the boundary to meet that requirement.

This is, however, just a respite for the people of Beaver Creek. Time to take in a deep breath and get ready for the next battle in our efforts to have our own autonomy. You can bet money on the fact that Oregon City, even with the new leadership coming onboard in January, will have their sites set on the land south of the golf course and more.

David Dodds, the Mayor of West Linn, is beginning a process to change the law put into effect by the Oregon Legislature by the lobbying of the home building industry. Mr Dodds is attempting to slam the brakes on what the officials of the City of West Linn see as State mandated sprawl. If West Linn succeeds the expanding of the Urban Growth Boundary may be a thing of the past.

West Linn is actively soliciting support from the Mayors of all Oregon cities to make two changes in state law. Letters were sent out to more than 250 Oregon Mayors and are intended to precipitate action by the 2003 Legislature. One of the changes would eliminate the need for cities in the larger urban areas to supply a 20 year supply of land for residential uses. The second change would amend system development charges to let cities collect fees for the growth imposed on schools as well as other services such as fire, police and libraries. Only time will tell. The Editor

Oregon's Only Elementary Community 101 Class Gets Underway

With the help of the PGE Foundation, Mrs. Carol Dubuy's 4th and 5th grade class is involved in Community 101. PGE Foundation is committed to improving the quality of life for Oregonians. To achieve this mission, the Foundation seeks out and funds programs that enrich Oregon. It contributes approximately $1.25 million annually in grants to support the following primary areas of Oregon life: Education, Healthy Families, Environment, and Arts. The Community 101 program is about getting students involved in their community. The students involved are looking for nonprofit organizations that deal with those issues.

At the beginning of the year PGE gave the Community 101 group $5,200.00 to give to nonprofits. Mrs. Dubuy's class sent out a survey to the Carus Community to get their opinions on which problems were the most important in their area. The community returned 154 surveys to the students. Most of the community believed that funding for education and family problems were the most important issues. In December, the class sent grant applications to nonprofit organizations in Clackamas County. In January and February they will read the grant applications, visit nonprofits, and decide who will get the money. In April, they will have a presentation for the public to give out the awards.

During Community 101, students must do volunteer work, and write a grant as well as work with the nonprofits. They asked Ed Armstrong, the grant writer for the Canby School District, to come out to their classroom to talk to them about grants. He gave them plenty of useful information about writing and reviewing grants. In December the class was to write a grant to SOLV to fund the environmental project they will be doing at Canby Community Park.

PGE is also willing to meet up to $500 fund raised by the class. The class has chosen to raise money for Kristin's Closet, which will have two-piece pajama sets for children in cancer treatment at Emmanuel. Students are excited about helping their community and working with the PGE Foundation.

something you can get." That is a message parents need to give their children every day.

Too many parents believe success in school is mostly due to intelligence. In fact, the opposite is true. Children who are willing to work hard at a subject often learn more than bright students who do not apply themselves. That message carries over the rest of their life. Even the most gifted athlete can't be a winner if he or she does not practice everyday. Even the greatest singer needs to study throughout his or her career.

The highest achievers are often those who have worked the hardest and done the most with the gift they have. Smart is something you can get!!

Oregon law makes it the parents' responsibility to have their children in school and the responsibility of the school to keep accurate records concerning each child's attendance. Acceptable excuses for absence include illness, death in the family or emergency situations that make it impossible for a child to attend school.

Please make sure that the office has the most current numbers to reach you. When your children are sick we need to be able to get a hold of you. Please let us know if your home number has changed, or if you have a new work number or cell number.

Inclement Weather

Does your child's teacher know where he/she needs to go if school has to close early due to inclement weather or emergency conditions? It is imperative that your child's teacher knows this information. At Carus we use an Emergency Closure Form that parents fill out stating where their child needs to go. Please make sure that you have given this information to your child's teacher. If not, forms are available from your child's teacher or the office.

Well Someone Had to Be First!

Being first is always nice! NOT! This time I would have greatly appreciated not being in the first household in the Beavercreek Exchange to get hijacked!

Now, I'm not talking about my car or any other form of transportation. I'm talking about on the Information Super Highway!

Surfing the Internet is a lot of fun if you have a question and you need to find the answer. There is a wealth of information out there for the person who has the time and the know how to find it.

I have read for nearly a year about an Internet problem where your connection can be redirected to somewhere out in the hinter lands without your knowledge. I felt somewhat secure knowing that 900 numbers are blocked in our exchange. Well that is all well and good but... International calls are not.

When I signed our house up for BCT Long Distance at 14¢/ minute for in state and US calling; International calling was not an option. Later, I remember reading somewhere that International calling was also being offered. If you wanted more information you could call BCT and get the facts. Seeings I don't make International calls I never called. I wasn't interested.

Well... International calling is available by default. It is not something that you call to have put on your service. I did not know this.

This month when the phone bills came there was quite a surprise waiting for us. There were two calls to some place called Sao Tome with a phone number in a format that was not familiar. Not only that, but the real shocker was the amount for the calls. These phone calls were billed at $2.99/ min. Yikes! I've since heard it could have been much worse.

Well, I now know where Sao Tome is. It is an island in the Gulf of Guinea off the coast of Western Africa.

I had noticed dialers being installed on one of our systems even though when asked if we wanted them installed we said "No." I kept getting rid of these things as they reared their ugly heads, but one got past me and did the damage before I removed it.

I called BCT and found out that I had International calling capabilities that I was not aware of. Blocks immediately went on both our phone lines so that no International calls can be made again. Hopefully this will keep the problem from rearing its ugly head again!

I'm going to install a free program called "Pop-Up Stopper" available for free from www.panicware.com on both computers and really tighten down on the ActiveX controls and Javascript that Internet Explorer can run.

I'm currently working to get these charges credited back. This is not a scam, but fraud! I will let you know how it all turns out.

Another problem has come up. Apparently Sprint has sent me a phone bill for a call to the Cook Islands. A 2 minute call cost almost $14.00. Isn't this great? I'm still trying to get ahold of Sprint so they can explain to me how I can direct dial a call from my house through their network without being a customer of theirs.

So... if you surf the Internet, you might want to call BCT and talk to them about your calling capabilities.

If you are surfing the Internet and a site asks you if it can install a program and you did not initiate the download don't just click on "no." Disconnect from the Internet. Shut down the system and then restart to continue. Don't assume that because it says you are connected to BCT that someone has not hijacked your phone line.

Try to be aware of which sites you are connected to. DO NOT turn the volume down so that you do not have to hear the modem dial. A lot of people do this because they do not like to hear the noise that the modem makes. If you are online and all of a sudden you hear your modem redialing, disconnect. This will be a clue that your connection has been disconnected from BCT and that the site is dialing you into a phone number who knows where. Some sites however, will turn the modem sound down so that you do not hear the redial. Oh, the delights of high technology! The Editor

The Livery Stable

Anyone who thinks that Hertz has a new and ingenious business couldn't be more wrong! The Livery Stable furnished the same kind of service for perhaps a hundred years before there was a Hertz. Mr. Edward E. Brodie, a long-time editor and owner of the Oregon City Enterprise Courier, wrote:

"I came to Oregon City in the horse and buggy days when John Cooke and Harry Moody operated livery stables; the latter boasted possession of the only two hacks in town, one of them an ancient vehicle."

We remember at least two such stables, the name of one escapes my memory, but Mr. Henry Hughes operated one near the river, which later was sold to Mr. George Eggmann. This was the way we were introduced to our new home in Oregon, arriving in Oregon City in October of 1913. My father arranged to have Mr. Henry Hughes take us out to the Henrici district well after midnight over a rock road that was full of chuckholes, which we were never really prepared for, and which combined to guarantee a rough and jolting ride for the nearly six miles to the Harris farm, our destination. It was an experience that made a lasting impression.

The farmers who came to town to do their trading would haul produce and either sell or trade them for groceries, feed, kerosene, or whatever, and while there would put their team up at the livery barn until ready for the return trip home. It was not uncommon to see horses unhitched and tied to the rear of the wagon or rig with their bridles removed and nose bags fastened in place while still fully harnessed. This was how some were able to beat livery stable costs.

A farmer's trip to town usually combined business with pleasure; and with the business attended to, they would bend their elbows in the bars, many making the rounds, often tarrying too long. At "STOP TAP", which was midnight, they headed for the livery stables and the ever-present smell of horses and manure, to retrieve their horses for the long ride home. Some would need the help of the livery man to help him climb aboard, then yell, "Get Up" and with Old Dobbin in full charge, navigate the way home and land him at the farm gate. Sometimes when the sun was high in the sky, Old Dobbin was found patiently waiting for his lord and master to wake up and open the gate.

Probably most of those patronizing the livery stables would be the "drummers" (salesmen) who worked out of the wholesale houses based in Portland and who were out calling on the trade in the out-lying areas. These stables were also a sort of hangout or head-quarters for horse-traders. We are told that sixty years ago the livery stable was off limits to the fairer sex. This was probably because traveling salesmen were often "young gay blades" who were the ones who brought the latest jokes to town. Also the workers at the stables were at times noted for their profanity rather than their gentility. In all fairness we should add that no one class of our society has a corner on this sort of thing.

In the pioneer days if one traveled, one did so by stage. Upon arriving in Oregon City and needing to travel farther, and when not wanting to ride "Shank's Pony", one would head for the Livery Stable and either hire a horse to ride or a horse or team with a "rig".

"Let Hertz put you in the driver's seat," is really pretty old stuff. Only years later could one travel by train by way of the Southern Pacific from north or south. To and from Portland one could utilize the Electric Line of the Portland Railroad, Light and Power (P.R.L&P).

If and when the city folks wanted to drive into the countryside or had business in the rural areas, they would hire their rigs from the livery stables. Also, in the early days many ministers got to their churches to conduct worship services by patronizing the livery stables. These were hardy pioneer preachers often serving several churches and held two to three services each Sunday. These rugged souls would eat with some family of their congregation and probably bed the horse(s) down in the farmer's barn and return to town the following day.

River, Tacoma and Bellevue community colleges.

The Cougars recruited 14 players for its first season. With 11 players on the field at a time, that left few reserves for the team. As a result, team members often played for the duration of the games without a break. Nelson plans to build on the team's foundation before next season, adding strength and numbers to the players.

"I think it only gets better now," said Athletic Director Jim Jackson, who campaigned to bring women's soccer to CCC. "This is a real positive step for our program."

The soccer team, along with the volleyball and cross country teams were presented to the CCC Board of Education at its regular meeting Dec. 11.

CCC's Wilsonville Campus Offers Videoconferencing

At a time when everyone is watching the bottom line, videoconferencing can increase productivity in the office and reduce the costs associated with travel. Clackamas Community College's Wilsonville campus now offers an interactive videoconference site that can connect with as many as three other sites around the globe.

The college's Wilsonville campus has increased services available to the business community since it formed the nation's first Utility Training Alliance at the campus in 2001. The campus now serves as a regional training center for employees of Portland General Electric and PacifiCorp in addition to offering credit and noncredit courses to the community.

Videoconferencing connects remote locations through an interactive system that includes a voice-activated camera and audio and video system. Several meetings between remote locations can be conducted in a day. In addition, videoconferencing is an educational delivery alternative that can connect students to speakers and resources that may not be available locally.

Videoconferencing fees begin at about $95 an hour and run up to about $350 an hour. The videoconference center is available seven days a week and evenings. The center is closed on major holidays. In addition to the videoconference site, the Wilsonville campus offers classroom and meeting space and a computer lab that can accommodate up to 18 users at a time. For information and availability,

Clackamas County Commissioner Michael Jordan Elected Second Vice President of Association of Oregon Counties

Clackamas County Commissioner Michael Jordan was chosen by his peers last month at the annual gathering of the Association of Oregon Counties (AOC) in Portland to be that organization's second vice president. Jordan's election to the leadership post puts the Commissioner in line to be president of the 36-county association beginning in the fall of 2004.

Jordan joins a leadership team that was also elected by conference participants to serve for the next year. The team includes Columbia County Commissioner Tony Hyde, who will serve as the AOC's president, Klamath County Commissioner Al Switzer, first vice president, and Lincoln County Commissioner Jean Cowan, treasurer.

"Michael Jordan has done outstanding work for the people of Clackamas County and he has been a diligent chair of AOC's Public Safety Steering Committee this past year," said Hyde. "Now Clackamas County and the 35 other Oregon counties stand to benefit even more as Michael joins the executive committee. Collectively, as an executive committee, we look forward to working with the governor elect and legislative leadership to help guide the state through our current financial and economic challenges."

Jordan, who has been a County Commissioner since 1999, served ten years as City Administrator for the City of Canby. Jordan has served on the Canby City Council, chaired the Canby Budget Committee and served as a member of the League of Oregon Cities Board of Directors. He also served on the Clackamas County Charter Review Committee, Commission on Children and Families and Economic Development Committee. Prior to serving in government, Jordan worked for eight years for the Pacific Power and Light Company, now a subsidiary of PacifiCorp, on water systems and project scheduling. "I look forward to working with my fellow County elected officials throughout Oregon as we reach across the urban-rural divide," said Jordan. "By working together, Oregon's counties can strengthen our partnerships with the State and Federal governments and with other local governments, community organizations and businesses." For more information call Michael Jordan at 503-655-8581.

Booster Happenings

The Beavercreek Boosters would like to take this opportunity to thank the residents of Beavercreek and the surrounding area for their support during the Christmas festivities that the Beavercreek Boosters hosted this year.

The Boosters had their annual "Breakfast with Santa" at the Beavercreek Grange on Sunday, November 30, 2002. This breakfast was the most successful one to date. This was followed the next weekend with the annual Christmas Tree Sale and Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony that was held at the Corner Park on December 7th.

The Boosters were also involved in the toy and food drive with Clackamas County Fire District #1 for the less fortunate in our area.

Beavercreek Fire Personnel to Move into New Building by February 1

It is about to happen. The fire personnel and the equipment for the Beavercreek Fire Station will be moving into their new building between January 20th and February 1st.

The new building is located on Beavercreek Rd between the Beavercreek School and Carus Rd.

The crews will be waiting for all the finishing touchups and final cleaning of the facility before they actually move in and take possession. If you haven't been out Beavercreek Rd lately and seen the new building you should check it out. There is a new fire signal on Beavercreek Rd so that in case of fire you will have to stop so that the fire equipment can enter the roadway safely.

The moving in will be ahead of schedule due to the building being finished ahead of time. Now that doesn't happen too often. The Editor

Carus CPO Spotlight

The December meeting of the Carus CPO took place on Thursday, December 12, 2002, at the Beavercreek Christian Church on Hwy 213 at 7:00 p.m. This was a short meeting as there were no land use actions before the members.

The next meeting will be held at the same location and time on Thursday, January 9, 2003. At this time there is no scheduled speaker.

The February meeting that is to be held on Thursday, February 13, 2003, will have Maggie Dickerson and Kay Pollock, both of Clackamas County, who will be talking to the members about the "Green Corridor" assessment process.

The County wishes to get special input from the CPOs regarding zoning issues.

The CPOs and citizens still need to get answers from the County to these questions: How will this affect our property's marketability? and how will this affect the usage of our property?

The answers to these questions are policy decisions that will be made by the County Commissioners. The citizenry needs to know how the County Commissioners intend to address these issues before the project is completed.

This is an opportunity to get information and give input before any action is taken. If you need further information, please call 503-632-7063.

Beavercreek Charitable Trust

There was no meeting of the Beavercreek Charitable Trust for the month of December.

The next scheduled meeting will be on January 14, 2003, at the Henrici office of Beaver Creek Cooperative Telephone Company at 7:30 p.m.

It's Official!

It will be of interest to the citizens of the Beavercreek area as to what kind of business will be drawn to our little community as a result of the sale.

Again this year the annual food and toy drive was a great success. The packages and boxes of food were delivered on Saturday, December 21st to 112 needy families in the area.

The annual event has many players. The Beavercreek Lions and Beavercreek Boosters along with the local Boy Scout Troops gather at the Fire Station to sort the food into boxes and wrap the gifts for the children.
